The Importance of Automating Business Processes

Every day, each company generates hundreds of invoices, orders, or delivery notes that need to be processed, executed, or archived.

This action is essential in communication with our suppliers because they:

Require timely receipt of invoices.

Need to organize their accounts.

Have to make forecasts for their products or services.

The more ease and security we provide to our suppliers in terms of orders and payments, the better terms and budgets they can offer me.

Taking care of my supplier is taking care of myself.

OCR: The Best Ally for Achieving Success

On a daily basis, we spend about 30% of our workday on administrative tasks – a significant amount of valuable time dedicated to low-value activities. These tasks, though essential for the proper functioning of the company and its business relationships with clients and suppliers, often consume more time than they should.

This dilemma finds a solution in OCR, a character recognition system that automatically reads and processes your orders, invoices, delivery notes, or simple notes, reducing the daily document management from hours to minutes for any company.

In this way, OCR becomes your ally in ensuring timely and accurate communication with suppliers, clients, and even enhancing the quality of your employees' work.

01 Providing greater efficiency and speed

Suppliers appreciate time savings in each of their processes. Therefore, by implementing technologies like artificial intelligence, the reception and management of documents such as invoices, delivery notes, or memos are streamlined. This results in increased accuracy and speed in transactions and requests.

02 Eliminating the possibility of error

Ensuring the accuracy of each document transferred between a supplier and its client reduces waiting times and enhances the productivity of employees in both companies.

This enables them to alleviate stress and focus their efforts on higher-value tasks.
